

TROY NIGHTLIFE

The Ale House is a classic corner bar, sort of the drinker's equivalent to Willie Wonka's Chocolate Factory in that it seems bigger inside than it looks outside. The front bar is cozy and intimate, but the back room, however, is the real prize, with the best assortment of pub grub available in the Capital region.

Brown's Brewing Company The atmosphere is excellent--it's an old factory of some kind, and not usually crowded. They have excellent beer and fresh-brewed root beer. The food is excellent, the ambiance is nice, and the back deck is even better!

Ruck You just can't get any better than the Ruck. A great place to hang out, either after work or late night. Terrific Happy Hour, especially on Fridays with the free wings. There is a laid back atmosphere that is very relaxing and perfect for a great evening.

Ryan's Wake is a good hometown type of bar. It is a classic Irish pub supported by the fact that a Murphy's Red Ale commercial was filmed here two weeks after opening with the producer saying it was the most authentic one he's seen. The bar staff are friendly and attentive. The owner takes pride in his establishment and it shows. Grilled sandwiches are the main thing on the menu and they are the best in the area. This is the place to go to be with friends or meet new ones.
